1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 Skyryse has brought nine distinct counterclaims against Moog, supported by 3 plausible, detailed factual allegations. Skyryse alleges, for example, that Moog ex-4 ploited a trusted business partnership to acquire Skyryse’s most sensitive infor-5 mation; breached its confidentiality duties and stole Skyryse’s trade secrets; de-6 frauded Skyryse so it could abandon it as a partner; and used Skyryse’s confidential 7 information to unfairly compete against it. Moog’s kitchen-sink motion to dismiss 8 all nine counterclaims suffers from three fundamental flaws and must be denied.

9 First, from its opening page Moog prematurely tries to litigate factual disputes 10 on their merits. Moog wrongly decries Skyryse’s allegations as “false” and “spin,” 11 submits over a dozen new exhibits, and provides its own “background” and version 12 of events that, according to Moog, “tells the true story.” Skyryse rejects Moog’s self-13 serving view of the facts, but those disputes are for trial. In this posture, the Court 14 accepts Skyryse’s allegations as true and draws all reasonable inferences in its favor.
15 Moog’s hyper-partisan, contrary view of the facts is not grounds for dismissal.

16 Second, Moog repeatedly fails to engage with the specific, well-pleaded facts 17 laid out in Skyryse’s counterclaims. Moog instead argues in cursory fashion that 18 Skyryse has not pleaded “any facts” to support its claims, largely ignoring thirty 19 pages of plausible factual averments that demonstrate the opposite.

20 Third, Moog gets the law wrong. It nowhere mentions Twombly or Iqbal or 21 their progeny, establishing the now well-settled principle that a pleading that states 22 a plausible claim for relief will overcome a motion to dismiss. Moog ignores this 23 basic pleading standard because it knows Skyryse has easily met it. Moog also is 24 frequently mistaken on the law, for example, confusing its own unmet discovery 25 obligations with pleading requirements, and ignoring if not misrepresenting the case 26 law it relies on, which often undermines its arguments. Respectfully, the Court 27 should deny Moog’s motion in full.

28

1 II. LEGAL STANDARD

2 On a motion to dismiss, the Court accepts allegations in the complaint as true 3 and draws all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff. *Cahill v. Liberty Mut.
4 Ins. Co.*, 80 F.3d 336, 337-38 (9th Cir. 1996).¹ Dismissal is “proper only where there 5 is no cognizable legal theory or an absence of sufficient facts alleged to support a 6 cognizable legal theory.” Shroyer v. New Cingular Wireless Servs., 622 F.3d 1035, 7 1041 (9th Cir. 2010). The complaint need only contain enough factual content “to 8 raise a reasonable expectation that discovery will reveal evidence” of the claim. Bell 9 Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 556 (2007). “[D]etailed factual allegations” 10 are not necessary and “a complaint that states a plausible claim for relief survives a 11 motion to dismiss.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678-799 (2009).

12 III. THE COURT SHOULD DENY MOOG’S MOTION.

13 A. Skyryse sufficiently alleges that Moog misappropriated Skyryse’s 14 trade secrets.

15 Moog ignores Skyryse’s plausible, factually supported allegations and argues 16 that Skyryse’s fourth counterclaim should be dismissed because Skyryse purportedly 17 failed to identify its trade secrets or plead facts “showing when and how Moog mis-18 appropriated” them. (Mot. at 27-30.) Moog is wrong on the facts and the law.

19 1. Skyryse sufficiently alleges its trade secrets.

20 Skyryse’s counterclaims describe in ample factual detail examples of trade 21 secrets Moog misappropriated, after Skyryse had confidentially entrusted Moog 22 with them. These include:

13 (See also Counterclaims, ¶¶ 40-45, 79, 109-112.)

14 This is more than sufficient to allege Skyryse’s trade secrets. As Moog admits, 15 “specificity as to the precise trade secrets misappropriated is not required” in a plead-16 ing. (See Dkt. 180 at 11, citing Capricorn Mgmt. Sys., Inc. v. Gov’t Emps. Ins. Co., 17 No. 15-CV-2926-DRH-SIL, 2016 WL 1370937, at *3 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 6, 2016) 18 (holding that “claim that plaintiff’s proprietary program ‘enhanced’ fraud detection, 19 enabled ‘customization and automation of the claims management process,’ moni-20 tored employee efficiency and detected fraudulent prescriptions was sufficient.”).) 21 At the pleading stage, the Defend Trade Secrets Act does not require “a plaintiff to 22 first disclose trade secrets before being able to receive discovery from the defend-23 ant.” Yeiser Rsch. & Dev., LLC v. Teknor Apex Co., No. 17-CV-1290-BAS-MSB, 24 2019 WL 2177658, at *4 (S.D. Cal. May 20, 2019).

25 Moog ignores the law and never engages with the facts above, and instead 26 complains that Skyryse has long objected “that Moog’s trade secret claims failed to 27 satisfy the particularity requirement.” (Mot. at 29.) Moog confuses its own unful-28 filled discovery obligations with pleading standards. A year into this lawsuit, Moog

1 still has failed to comply with a court order requiring it to identify its own trade
2 secrets with particularity *in response to an interrogatory.*² (Dkt. 205.) But Moog’s 3 discovery failures have nothing to do with the sufficiency of Skyryse’s pleading.

4 Moog relies on Navigation Holdings, but that court rejected a similar argu-5 ment to Moog’s, saying the law does not require plaintiffs to “distinguish the trade 6 secrets they allege were misappropriated from the more nebulous larger bucket of 7 confidential information” in their pleadings. Navigation Hldgs., LLC v. Molavi, 445 8 F. Supp. 3d 69, 75-76 (N.D. Cal. 2020). Instead, the plaintiffs sufficiently alleged 9 “two categories of trade secrets” in their pleading: a set of “client information” and 10 “a specialized process for anodizing unfinished alloy tubes.” Id. at 76. Skyryse has 11 described its trade secrets in more detail, and not in “broad and conclusory 12 terms.” Id.

13 The other cases Moog cites are distinguishable. Each violated the rule against 14 using mere “catchall language” to allege trade secrets unlimited in scope—unlike 15 Skyryse’s allegations. Supra at 2-3; see Masimo Corp. v. Apple Inc., No. SACV20-16 48-JVS-JDEX, 2020 WL 4037213, at *4 (C.D. Cal. June 25, 2020) (“Although the 17 plaintiff need not define every minute detail, ‘[t]he Ninth Circuit has rejected the use 18 of ‘catchall’ language’”); Invisible Dot, Inc. v. DeDecker, No. 2:18-CV-08168-RGK-

20 alleged trade secrets were “without limitation”); Whiteslate, LLP v. Dahlin, No. 20-21 CV-1782-W-BGS, 2021 WL 2826088, at *6 (S.D. Cal. July 7, 2021) (finding trade 22 secret allegations did “not constitute more than ‘catchall phrases’”); *Becton, Dickin-

25 categorically using overly broad phrases such as “design review templates” and 26 “source code files”); Genasys Inc. v. Vector Acoustics, LLC, No. 22-CV-152-TWR-

² Skyryse separately has raised this issue with Magistrate Rocconi.

1 BLM, 2022 WL 16577872, at *10 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 1, 2022) (dismissing claim where 2 “Plaintiff relies on conclusory buzzwords pulled from CUTSA and DTSA”).

3 2. Skyryse sufficiently alleges Moog’s misappropriation.

4 Skyryse makes plausible factual allegations describing Moog’s misappropriation, 5 even identifying Moog documents reflecting it. (See, e.g., Counter-6 claims, ¶¶ 75-80, 108-118.) Yet Moog claims that “Skyryse does not allege any facts
7 describing what trade secrets Moog misappropriated, who was involved in the mis-8 appropriation, and how they were used at Moog.” (Mot. at 30.) Moog is wrong.

9 First, Skyryse alleges specific facts about its trade secrets as described above.
10 Skyryse also alleges that it shared its confidential information with Moog, including 11 during meetings at Skyryse’s headquarters where Moog personnel inspected 12 Skyryse’s aircraft. (Id., ¶ 40.) After obtaining Skyryse’s confidential information 13 and business strategies, Moog used false pretenses to abandon Skyryse, put an end 14 to their collaboration, and set out to unfairly compete directly against Skyryse with 15 copycat technologies. (Id., ¶ 2.) Moog’s own documents show the very secrets that 16 Skyryse had shared with Moog in confidence regarding certification plans.
17 (Id., ¶¶ 75-79.)

18 These detailed factual allegations are more than sufficient.³ Keyssa, Inc. v.
19 Essential Prod., Inc., No. 17-CV-05908-HSG, 2019 WL 176790, at *3 (N.D. Cal.
20 Jan. 11, 2019) (denying motion to dismiss where complaint identified “various mar-21 keting materials for the products that highlight the allegedly-misappropriated tech-22 nology”). Moog’s reliance on Space Data Corp. v. X, et al. is misplaced because 23 there plaintiff’s “conclusory assertions” were “not supported by adequate factual al-24 legments.” No. 16-CV-03260-BLF, 2017 WL 5013363, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Feb.
25 16, 2017).

26

28 ³ Moog itself argued that as plaintiff, it was “not required to allege exactly how Skyryse misused Moog’s trade secret” at the pleading stage, and now tries to hold Skyryse to a different standard. (See Dkt. 61 at 8.)

1 B. Skyryse sufficiently alleges Moog breached the parties' contracts.

2 1. The Court has personal jurisdiction over Moog.

3 Skyryse alleges sufficient facts supporting personal jurisdiction over Moog.
4 Moog employs hundreds of people in Torrance and entered several contracts with 5 the El Segundo-based Skyryse. (Counterclaims, ¶¶ 5, 9-10, 25-27, 31.) Jurisdiction 6 is established “by virtue of Moog’s transacting and doing business in the State of 7 California and this District, and committing tortious and unlawful acts and contrac-8 tual breaches” in this state and district. (Id., ¶ 9.) Harris Rutsky & Co. Ins. Servs. v.
9 Bell & Clements Ltd., 328 F.3d 1122, 1132 (9th Cir. 2003).

10 Moog does not dispute any of this. Instead, Moog argues “this Court lacks 11 jurisdiction and venue to adjudicate” Skyryse’s breach of contract counterclaim 12 based solely on a forum selection provision in the Terms & Conditions (T&C) of 13 one contract between the parties. (Mot. at 4, 32.) But Moog ignores black-letter law 14 (including its own cited caselaw) that parties cannot deprive a court of personal ju-15 risdiction through contract. (See id., at 31 citing Phillips v. Audio Active Ltd., 494 16 F.3d 378, 386 (2d Cir. 2007) (explaining that a “jurisdiction-conferring clause ...
17 does not deprive” a party “of the right to sue in another [forum] having personal 18 jurisdiction over the defendant”).) The Court should reject Moog’s jurisdictional 19 challenge.

20 2. Skyryse plausibly alleges Moog’s breaches.

21 Moog ignores Skyryse’s detailed allegations to claim that Skyryse has not al-22 leged any facts showing Moog’s breach (Mot. at 32). Skyryse alleges the parties 23 entered into at least two NDAs “in order to protect Skyryse’s confidential and pro-24 prietary information” (Counterclaims, ¶ 25), and that those NDAs restricted Moog’s 25 ability to use or disclose Skyryse’s “broadly defined ‘Proprietary Information.’” 26 (Id., ¶¶ 25-27.) Moog and Skyryse also entered into an SOW under which Moog 27 agreed to deliver hardware to Skyryse (id., ¶ 31-34) and terms and conditions with 28 additional restrictions on the use of Skyryse’s “Foreground IP.” (Id., ¶ 35-36.)

1 Skyryse alleges that Moog breached its obligations, including by using Skyryse's 2 confidential and Proprietary Information for its own future business plans 3 (id., ¶¶ 72-80), and by failing to [REDACTED], 4 even after demanding and receiving payment for a significant portion of the work.
5 (Id., ¶¶ 2, 57.) Skyryse's allegations state a valid breach claim. See, e.g., Penrose 6 Computer Marketgroup, Inc. v. Camin, 682 F. Supp. 2d 202, 212-13 (N.D.N.Y.
7 2010) (upholding breach claim where plaintiff generally alleged "that [defendant] 8 breached the non-disclosure agreement" when he "utilized the highly confidential 9 and trade secret information"); Intelligen Power Sys., LLC v. dVentus Tech., LLC, 10 2015 WL 3490256, at *4-5 (S.D.N.Y. Jun. 2, 2015) (upholding breach claim where 11 plaintiff performed by "paying its deposit" and defendant failed "to deliver the prod-12 uct as promised").

13 Ignoring all this, Moog argues that Skyryse purportedly (1) pleaded no facts 14 that Moog improperly used confidential information; (2) failed to identify any trade 15 secret or confidential information Moog misappropriated; and (3) "cancelled 16 SOW1" so "Moog was thereby released of any obligation." (Mot at 32.) These ar-17 guments lack merit.

18 Skyryse alleges in detail that Moog's internal documents reflect that it used 19 Skyryse's confidential information for improper purposes. (Id., ¶¶ 75-79.) As just 20 one example, this confidential information includes Skyryse's "Foreground IP" re-21 lating to Skyryse's confidential certification plans. (Id., ¶ 80; see also, e.g., id., 22 ¶¶ 75-79, 109.) And, Moog's claim that it was "released of any obligation for all the 23 deliverables under SOW1" (Mot. at 32) ignores Skyryse's allegation that Moog de- 24 frauded Skyryse to induce it to "cancel" the SOW (Counterclaims, ¶¶ 53-62), which 25 renders any such release invalid. Centro Empresarial Cempresa S.A. v. Am. Movil, 26 S.A.B. de C.V., 17 N.Y.3d 269, 276 (N.Y. App. 2011) (finding release invalid when 27 based on fraud).

28

1 Moog's authority is inapposite. Precision Concepts, Inc. v. Bonsanti is irrele-2 vant because it did not involve a claim for breach of contract. 569 N.Y.S.2d 124, 3 125-27 (1991). Art Capital Group, LLC v. Carlyle Investment Management, LLC is 4 also inapplicable because plaintiff failed to "identify what confidential information 5 was allegedly misused," and because the conduct underlying the claim was permit-6 ted under the parties' agreement. 55 N.Y.S.3d 54-55 (2017). Skyryse, by contrast, 7 alleges in detail the confidential information divulged to Moog (Counterclaims, ¶¶ 8 41-46) and how Moog's development plans reflect its unauthorized use of Skyryse's 9 confidential information. (Id., ¶¶ 72-80); Penrose, 682 F. Supp. at 212-13.

10 3. The forum selection provision does not require dismissal.

11 Moog separately moves to dismiss Skyryse's breach of contract claim under 12 Rule 12(b)(3) for improper venue. Moog's motion must be denied. To begin, the 13 existence of a forum selection clause is irrelevant to the Rule 12(b)(3) analysis, 14 which considers only whether venue is proper under the relevant statutes. See Atl.
15 Marine Const. Co. v. U.S. Dist. Ct. for W. Dist. of Texas, 571 U.S. 49, 55-60 (2013) 16 ("If venue is proper under federal venue rules, it does not matter for the purpose of 17 Rule 12(b)(3) whether the forum-selection clause points to a [different] forum.").
18 This alone is sufficient basis to deny Moog's motion. Primary Color Sys. Corp. v.
19 Agfa Corp., No. SACV-17-00761-JVS-DFMX, 2017 WL 8223379, at *2 (C.D. Cal.
20 June 7, 2017) (denying 12(b)(3) motion to dismiss). To the extent the Court finds 21 Moog has properly raised venue arguments under Section 1404(a)—which it has 22 not—Moog's motion still must be denied for at least three reasons.

23 a. The forum selection clause is inoperative.

24 First, the forum selection clause is inoperative because it did not survive ter-25 mination. When the parties intended a provision to survive termination, they in-26 cluded language saying so. For example, Section 23 of the T&C, on the use of tech-27 nical information, states that "this clause shall survive the expiration, completion, or 28

1 termination of this Agreement”; Section 32 identifies payment obligations that sur-2 vive termination; and Section 43 states that its non-competition restrictions survive 3 past the effective period. (Ex. D §§ 23, 32, 43.) The parties chose to omit similar 4 language from the forum selection clause, which thus did not survive the contract’s 5 termination. Quadrant Structured Prods. Co. v. Vertin, 23 N.Y.3d 549, 560 (2014) 6 (explaining where “parties to a contract omit terms—particularly, terms that are 7 readily found in other, similar contracts—the inescapable conclusion is that the par-8 ties intended the omission”). It would be “difficult to accept the proposition that 9 legal professionals negotiating what clauses would survive a contract’s termination 10 would go through the work of analyzing the contract for terms that they intended to 11 survive and omit the choice of forum clause, unless they did not intend that it sur-12 vive.” BASF Plant Sci., LP v. Commonwealth Sci. & Indus. Rsch. Org., No. 2:17-13 CV-503, 2019 WL 2017541, at *6 (E.D. Va. May 7, 2019), aff’d, 28 F.4th 1247
14 (Fed. Cir. 2022). Numerous courts facing similar facts about expired forum selection 15 clauses reached the same conclusion.⁴ The forum selection clause is no longer in 16 effect.

b. Enforcing the forum selection clause would be unreasonable.

Second, courts routinely decline to enforce forum selection clauses in similar circumstances where doing so would be contrary to public interest in factors such as

23 ⁴ See, e.g., TSI USA, LLC v. Uber Techs., Inc., No. 3:16-CV-2177-L, 2017 WL
24 106835, at *5 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 11, 2017), aff'd, No. 3:16-CV-2177-L, 2017 WL 25 3209399 (N.D. Tex. June 19, 2017) ("omission of the Forum-Selection Clause from 26 the Survival Clause therefore suggests that the parties did not intend for the Forum-27 Selection Clause to survive termination"); Junction Solutions, LLC v. MBS DEV, 28 Inc., No. 06-C-1632, 2007 WL 114306, at *4-5 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 9, 2007) (finding forum-selection clause did not survive termination where omitted from survival clause); Lockwood Corp. v. Black, 501 F. Supp. 261, 264 (N.D. Tex. 1980) (finding forum-selection clause terminated when contract was cancelled).

1 minimizing court congestion, having localized disputes decided at home, and judi-2 cial economy. See, e.g., Atl. Marine, 571 U.S. at 63 n.6; see also Piper Aircraft Co.
3 v. Reyno, 454 U.S. 235, 241, n.6 (1981). Applying these concepts, forum selection 4 clauses that lead to inefficient, non-localized, piecemeal litigation should not be en-5 forced. Moog and Skyryse collectively have asserted seventeen claims against one 6 another, many of them arising out of the same business relationship and agreements.
7 Skyryse alleges Moog breached several contracts, only one of which contains a fo-8 rum selection clause. The events underlying Skyryse’s claims occurred in this dis-9 trict, and Moog’s claims against Skyryse also arose in this district. (See Dkt. 297 10 at 26-27 (noting that the conduct at the “heart of many of Moog’s claims occurred 11 in California, where all the defendants reside”)). It would be unreasonable and inef-12 ficient to enforce a forum selection clause to sever two of fifteen claims and transfer 13 them back to New York.

14 Moog’s own conduct confirms that it would be unreasonable to resolve some 15 of the parties’ claims in New York and others here. In opposing Defendants’ motion 16 to transfer, Moog filed six opposition briefs and presented arguments at two hear-17 ings. (Dkts. 62, 63, 133, 239, 251, 270, 271, 294.) In these extensive proceedings 18 Moog never invoked the forum selection clause to try to keep any claims in 19 New York.⁵ If the forum selection clause had the power Moog now contends, one 20 would have expected Moog to say so in its oppositions to the transfer motion.

21 No authority requires the Court to sever and transfer just two of Skyryse’s 22 claims because of a forum selection clause. For example, in Carney v. Beracha, the 23 court explained that “in order for a forum selection clause to be sufficient grounds 24 to grant a motion to dismiss, it must be mandatory and cover all claims involved in

26
27 ⁵ Moog of course knew about the T&C’s forum selection clause, having invoked that 28 contract in its complaint and claimed that Skyryse breached a contract incorporated by it. (Complaint, ¶¶ 74, 224-30, Ex. F.)

1 the dispute,” unlike here where Skyryse alleges breaches of other contracts and sev-2 eral tort claims. 996 F. Supp. 2d 56, 71 (D. Conn. 2014). The Carney court denied 3 dismissal because a number of the “transactions at issue” were not covered by the 4 forum selection clause and enforcing it would have been “unreasonable, because it 5 would require piecemeal litigation in multiple fora and, in some cases, might require 6 multiple courts to adjudicate claims covering only portions of each transaction.” Id.; 7 see also Cmtys. Voice Line, L.L.C. v. Great Lakes Commc’n Corp., No. C-12-4048-8 MWB, 2014 WL 3102124 at *3 (N.D. Iowa July 7, 2014) (denying transfer because 9 it would be “inappropriate to require ‘piecemeal’ resolution of CVL’s claims against 10 AudioNow in two fora”); Horwitt v. Sarroff, No. 3:17-CV-1902-VAB, 2019 WL 11 13124295, at *13-14 (D. Conn. May 10, 2019) (denying transfer because severing 12 related claims would be unreasonable).

13 Moog relies heavily on Phillips, 494 F.3d at 383, but ignores that the court 14 there stated that the presumption of enforcing a forum selection clause is “rebutted” 15 by a party “making a sufficiently strong showing that ‘enforcement would be unre-16 sonable or unjust,’ as Skyryse has done. Id. at 383-84. Central National-Gottesman 17 is also of no use to Moog because that court agreed that the plaintiff showed “that 18 the forum selection clause in the bill of lading is unreasonable.” Cent. Nat'l-19 Gottesman, Inc. v. M.V. “GERTRUDE OLDENDORFF”, 204 F. Supp. 2d 675, 683-20 84 (S.D.N.Y. 2002). Moog’s reliance on Almont Ambulatory Surgery is also mis-21 placed because the court there too declined to enforce the mandatory forum selection 22 clause, as should the Court here. Almont Ambulatory Surgery Ctr., LLC v. UnitedH-23 ealth Grp., Inc., 99 F. Supp. 3d 1110, 1162-1165 (C.D. Cal. 2015).

c. Moog waived the forum selection clause.

25 Third, Moog waived any right it might have had under the forum selection 26 clause by taking “actions that are inconsistent with it.” Ferraro Foods, Inc. v. M/V 27 IZZET INCEKARA, No. 01-CIV-2682-RWS, 2001 WL 940562, at *3 (S.D.N.Y.
28 Aug. 20, 2001). In particular, when a party fails “to raise a venue objection within

1 the context of a section 1404(a) motion,” as Moog failed to do in opposing Skyryse’s 2 transfer motion, that failure “constitutes waiver of that particular objection.” Altman
3 v. Liberty Equities Corp., 322 F. Supp. 377, 379 (S.D.N.Y. 1971).

4 As mentioned above, the parties spent nearly nine months litigating a transfer 5 motion relating to Moog’s claims arising out of the same contracts and same busi-6 ness relationship at issue in Skyryse’s counterclaims. Not once did Moog argue that 7 the forum selection clause required any of its claims to remain in New York. In fact, 8 Moog conceded that “Moog could have filed” its claims for breach of contract “in 9 the Central District of California.” (Dkt. 62 at 9, 25.) Moog cannot now selectively 10 enforce that same provision against Skyryse. See, e.g., Horwitt, 2019 WL 13124295, 11 at *13-14; Carney, 996 F. Supp. 2d at 71; Ferraro Foods, Inc., 2001 WL 940562, at 12 *3; SE. Power Grp., Inc. v. Vision 33, Inc., 855 Fed. App’x 531, 535-36 (11th Cir.
13 2021).

14 C. Skyryse sufficiently alleges that Moog breached the implied 15 covenant of good faith and fair dealing.

16 Skyryse alleges in its second counterclaim that Moog deprived Skyryse of its 17 expected benefits under their agreements, including by inducing Skyryse to end part 18 of their relationship under false pretenses and then providing Skyryse with a sham 19 quote for subsequent work that Moog knew was unreasonable and intended Skyryse 20 to reject. (Counterclaims, ¶ 99.) Moog also surreptitiously purchased Skyryse’s 21 competitor Genesys to sidestep its non-compete obligations, and used Skyryse’s sen-22 sitive information to secretly work with Genesys to unfairly compete with Skyryse.
23 (Id., ¶¶ 73-77.) These allegations are sufficient to state an implied covenant claim.

24 For example, in P&G Auditors & Consultants, LLC v. Mega International 25 Commercial Bank Co., Ltd., the court upheld an implied covenant claim based on 26 highly similar factual allegations:

27
28

[The] complaint alleges breaches based on (a) improperly purporting to terminate the Agreement, thereby depriving P&G of its expected benefit of the bargain; (b) obtaining P&G’s most sensitive items under false pretenses and then secretly sharing [the] same with P&G’s competitor Navigant; (c) surreptitiously working behind P&G’s back with its rival to subvert the contract and blame P&G without basis; and (d) intentionally acting to cost P&G business with other clients.

No. 18-CV-9232-JPO, 2019 WL 4805862, at *6 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2019);⁶ see also Enzo Biochem, Inc. v. Affymetrix, Inc., No. 04-CIV-1555-RJS, 2013 WL 6987164, at *7 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 6, 2013) (denying summary judgment where plaintiff alleged that defendant provided “artificially high sales forecasts”); Dorset Indus., Inc. v. Unified Grocers, Inc., 893 F. Supp. 2d 395, 409-10 (E.D.N.Y. 2012) (upholding implied covenant claim where “defendant, ‘for [its] own self-interested reasons,’ offers a competing program directly to the retailers”).

Moog raises a number of meritless arguments in response. Moog first argues that Skyryse’s claim “sounds in tort” because it “is not tied to any particular contractual provision,” and is therefore precluded by the two-year statute of limitation. (Mot. at 33.) But Skyryse alleges that Moog deprived it of the benefits of the parties’ agreement, which means the claim arises in contract, and the statute of limitations is four years. Venkatraman v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, No. 19-CV-01386-LHK, 2019 WL 3037592, at *7 (N.D. Cal. July 11, 2019). Skyryse need not identify a particular contractual provision that was breached to state an implied covenant claim that sounds in contract. Dorset Indus., 893 F. Supp. 2d at 407 (“New York does not require that a breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing be tied to a specific contractual provision.”). And in any event, to the extent Skyryse’s claim sounds in tort, the two-year statute of limitations was tolled when Moog filed its Complaint

⁶ Although the P&G court dismissed the improper termination allegation as duplicative of plaintiff’s breach claim, the allegations underlying Skyryse’s counterclaim are distinguishable because, unlike the defendant in P&G, Moog did not have a right to terminate the T&C. (Counterclaim, ¶ 49.)

1 and therefore provides no basis for dismissal. See Gonzales v. City of L.A., No. 2:20-2 CV-03519-JGB-MAA, 2022 WL 3573915, at *4 (C.D. Cal. July 12, 2022), report
3 and recommendation adopted, No. 2:20-CV-03519-JGB-MAA, 2022 WL 4042576
4 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 31, 2022) (“As the Complaint was filed before the Counterclaims’ 5 two-year statute of limitations had expired, the Counterclaims are not time-barred.”).

6 Moog next argues that Skyryse’s implied covenant claim should be dismissed 7 as duplicative of its breach of contract counterclaim. (Mot. at 34.) Moog squarely 8 contradicts itself, having also argued that Skyryse’s implied covenant “claim is not 9 tied to any particular contractual provision or Moog’s alleged breach thereunder.”
10 (Id. at 33.) But Moog is also just wrong; Skyryse’s implied covenant claim arises 11 out of actions Moog took, which are neither expressly permitted nor prohibited by 12 the agreements, but deprived Skyryse of its benefits under them. This includes de-13 priving Skyryse of its benefits under Section 4 of SOW 1, under which Moog agreed 14 “[REDACTED]” and engage “[REDACTED]
15 [REDACTED]
16 [REDACTED].” (Counterclaims, ¶¶ 31, 98-100.) These terms are subject to an implied cov-17 enant that required Moog to work with Skyryse in good faith on successive phases.
18 (Id., ¶¶ 31-33, Ex. C at § 9.) Moog breached that obligation, for example, by fraud-19 ulently inducing Skyryse to “cancel” one part of their work, claiming it was “merely 20 ‘to facilitate the invoicing process,’” and by providing Skyryse with a sham quote 21 Skyryse would have no choice but to reject, so Moog could back out of their rela-22 tionship. (Id., ¶¶ 48-62, 72.)

23 Skyryse’s claims are significantly different from those dismissed in the cases 24 cited by Moog, which were duplicative of breach of contract claims. Atlantis Info.
25 Tech., GmbH v. CA, Inc., 485 F. Supp. 2d 224, 231 (E.D.N.Y. 2007) (dismissing 26 implied covenant claim where “allegations set forth in support of the claims are al-27 most identical”); O’Hearn v. Bodyonics, Ltd., 22 F. Supp. 2d 7, 11 (E.D.N.Y. 1998) 28 (dismissing claim where “breach of that duty is merely a breach of the underlying

1 contract"); Guz v. Bechtel Nat. Inc., 24 Cal. 4th 317, 352 (2000) (explaining that a 2 "breach of the contract may also constitute a breach of the implied covenant of good 3 faith and fair dealing" but "a claim that merely realleges that breach as a violation 4 of the covenant is superfluous").

5 Moog raises three additional arguments,⁷ but they merely reflect disagreements 6 with factual allegations that the Court must accept as true.⁸ Moog first argues 7 that Skyryse's claim fails because Skyryse "expressly agreed to cancel the purchase 8 order for SOW1 and pay Moog for work completed." (Mot. at 34.) But Skyryse al-9 leges the opposite: Moog fraudulently induced it into cancelling the purchase order 10 to deprive Skyryse of the benefits of the parties' agreement. (Counterclaims ¶¶ 48-11 71); Pilkington N. Am., Inc. v. Mitsui Sumitomo Ins. Co. of Am., 460 F. Supp. 3d 12 481, 499 (S.D.N.Y. 2020) (upholding implied covenant claim where defendant 13 tricked plaintiffs "into substantially eliminating" their rights under contract).

14 Moog then argues that the claim should be dismissed because "Moog did not 15 provide any 'sham' quote." (Mot. at 34.) Again, Moog simply disputes Skyryse's 16 factual allegations, which must be accepted as true: Moog dishonestly and in bad 17 faith provided a sham quote it knew and intended that Skyryse would have to reject.
18 (Counterclaims, ¶¶ 66-72.)

19 Finally, Moog claims "Skyryse expressly contracted that Moog had no obli-20 gation to enter into any additional SOW for Phases 2-4." (Mot. at 34.) Again, this is 21 just Moog's view of disputed facts, or at best its own partisan interpretation of the 22 SOW, which the Court must reject because Skyryse's allegations must be accepted 23

24 _____
25 ⁷ Moog also argues that Skyryse's implied covenant claim should be dismissed for 26 lack of jurisdiction and venue. Those arguments fail for the reasons described in Section III.B.3.

27 ⁸ Moog improperly relies on the incorporation by reference doctrine to "to insert 28 their own version of events into the complaint to defeat otherwise cognizable claims." (Dkt. 360-1); Khoja v. Orexigen Therapeutics, Inc., 899 F.3d 988, 1002-1003 (2018) ("it is improper to assume the truth of an incorporated document if such assumptions only serve to dispute facts stated in a well-pleaded complaint.")

1 as true. In any event, Moog is wrong: each provision it cites reflects an agreement
2 [REDACTED]
3 [REDACTED].” (Counter-
4 claims, Ex. C, § 4; see also id., §§ 5, 9.) None of these provisions states that “Moog 5 had no obligation” to continue with its work for Skyryse, as Moog claims. Instead, 6 they reflect that the parties agreed to specific parameters of future work that would 7 be “[REDACTED].” This is enforceable un-8 under New York and California law. Tractebel Energy Mktg., Inc. v. AEP Power Mktg., Inc., 487 F.3d 89, 97-98 (2d Cir. 2007) (“fact that the contract anticipates that the 9 parties will have to negotiate these details in the future does not render the contract 10 unenforceable”); Sateriale v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 697 F.3d 777, 790 (9th Cir.
11 2012). Moog’s conduct depriving Skyryse of the benefits of its contracts constitutes 12 a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, as Skyryse has suf-13 ficiently alleged. Pilkington, 460 F. Supp. 3d at 499; P&G, 2019 WL 4805862, at *6.

15 D. Skyryse sufficiently alleges that Moog breached an implied 16 contract.

17 Skyryse alleges as a third counterclaim that “through their conduct and rela-18 tionship,” Moog and Skyryse “entered into an implied-in-fact contract to engage in 19 a [REDACTED].” (Counterclaims, ¶ 103.) Moog acknowledges 20 that California law applies, but asserts that the claim is time-barred and should be 21 dismissed because it is insufficiently pleaded. Each argument fails.

22 First, Moog fails to acknowledge that the statute of limitations began to toll 23 when Moog filed its complaint on March 7, 2022, which is well within two years.
24 Gonzales, 2022 WL 3573915, at *4.

25 Second, contrary to Moog’s arguments, Skyryse sufficiently alleges facts re-26 flecting the parties’ mutual intent to engage in a long-term business relationship for 27 the development of the R-44. (Counterclaims, ¶ 103.) These include promises by 28

1 Moog’s personnel, including its CEO, that the parties would work together to “de-2 velop [Skyryse’s] business model and solve some of the technical challenges on 3 [Skyryse’s] way to market success” (id., ¶ 50), and other senior Moog executives 4 who described “the path forward” for “Phase 2 SOW” (id., ¶ 57), and that the parties
5 were “close to agreement on a revised SoW” for future work to which they had com-6 mitted and agreed would be subject to change. (Id., ¶ 59.) These detailed allegations 7 stand in stark contrast to the facts of the case on which Moog relies, where an implied 8 contract was not found because the plaintiff had “not pled the most rudimentary 9 terms” of the agreements. Gateway Rehab & Wellness Ctr., Inc. v. Aetna Health of 10 Calif., Inc., No. CV-13-0087-DOC-MLG, 2013 WL 1518240, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Apr.
11 10, 2013).

12 Third, Moog incorrectly argues that this claim should be dismissed because 13 “an action based on an implied-in-fact or quasi-contract cannot lie where there exists 14 between the parties a valid express contract covering the same subject matter.” 15 (Mot. at 36.) But Skyryse is entitled to “alternatively plead both an implied contract 16 claim and an express contract claim even though they are inconsistent theories.” Ca- 17 lif. Spine & Neurosurgery Inst. v. United Healthcare Ins. Co., 19-cv-02417-LHK, 18 2019 WL 4450842, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 17, 2019); see also Lever Your Bus. Inc.
19 v. Sacred Hoops & Hardwood, Inc., No. 519CV01530CASKKX, 2020 WL
20 2465658, at *5 (C.D. Cal. May 11, 2020) (upholding “breach of an implied contract 21 claim” alleging “the same breach that forms the basis for [the] breach of an express 22 contract claim”). Moog’s citations to Lance Camper and Allied Trend are, thus, in-23 applicable because neither involved pleadings with alternative claims. Lance 24 Camper Mfg. Corp. v. Republic Indem. Co., 44 Cal. App. 4th 194, 203 (1996); Allied 26 4137605, at *3 (C.D. Cal. June 3, 2019).

27 The other cases Moog relies on do not require a different result. Forest Park 28 Pictures v. Universal Television Network, Inc. is of no use to Moog because the

1 Second Circuit reversed dismissal of the implied-in-fact claim despite plaintiff not 2 identifying the contract's definite terms. 683 F.3d 424, 435 (2d Cir. 2012). Similarly, 3 nKlosures, Inc. v. Avalon Lodging LLC does not help Moog because the Court up-4 held plaintiffs' implied contract claim. No. CV-22-00459-RSWL-JDEX, 5 2022 WL 17093927, at *8 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 17, 2022). Finally, Moses v. Apple Hos-
6 pitality Reit Inc., No. 14-CV-3131 DLI SMG, 2015 WL 1014327, at *4 (E.D.N.Y.
7 Mar. 9, 2015) and Robinson & Wilson, Inc. v. Stone, 35 Cal. App. 3d 396, 399 (Ct.
8 App. 1973) are both inapplicable because neither involved implied contract claims.

9 E. Skyryse plausibly and with specificity alleges that Moog 10 defrauded Skyryse.

11 Skyryse alleges plausibly and with particularity that Moog defrauded Skyryse, 12 in support of its fifth counterclaim. Moog fraudulently induced Skyryse to terminate 13 the parties' relationship (when Moog itself had no contractual right to do so) so 14 Moog could obtain payment despite failing to provide deliverables, obtain more of 15 Skyryse's confidential business information, and use that information as it acquired 16 Skyryse's competitor Genesys to unfairly compete with Skyryse. (Counter-17 claims, ¶¶ 48-77.) Moog argues that the fraud claims should be dismissed because 18 the identified statements are not actionable, Skyryse has not alleged reliance, and 19 Skyryse failed to comply with Rule 9(b). All three arguments fail.

20 First, Skyryse alleges false statements by Moog with particularity. For exam-21 ple:

22 • On March 9, 2020, Moog's David Norman falsely represented to Skyryse's 23 CTO, Gonzalez Rey, that Skyryse needed to cancel the agreement so the 24 parties could "come to an agreement on closing out on the original SOW 25 (Phase 1) ... and agreeing on a new SOW (Phase 2)." (Counter-claims, ¶¶ 56-58.)

26 • On March 25, 2020, Moog's Timothy Abbott falsely stated to Skyryse's 27 Mr. Rey that Skyryse needed to provide Moog with a formal letter "stating 28 the intent to revise the current statement of work" in order to "facilitate the invoicing process." (Id., ¶ 60.)

1 • On March 19, 2020, Mr. Abbott falsely claimed to Mr. Rey that the parties
2 were “close to an agreement on a revised SoW” and provided “takeaway 3 numbers” that were at best misleading and deceptive. (Id., ¶ 59.)

4 Skyryse also alleges that, despite its representations to the contrary, Moog 5 secretly never intended to continue with the project (id., ¶¶ 62, 66), as later con-6 firmed by Mr. Norman who acknowledged internally that Moog’s true intent was 7 always to unilaterally end the partnership with Skyryse. (Id., ¶ 71.) As he admitted 8 to Moog’s CEO, it was Moog, not Skyryse, that simply “[REDACTED] 9 [REDACTED]” even though Moog had no termination rights. (Id.)

10 These false statements and representations constitute actionable fraud.
11 Nordstrom, Inc. v. Republic of Frends, Inc., No. 17-CV-0444-w-MDD, 2017 WL 12 6059158, at *4 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 6, 2017) (upholding fraud claim based on “represen-
13 tation to Nordstrom that the change from Republic of Frends to Family of Frends 14 was only a name change, when in reality” it constituted an attempt to “exploit the 15 pre-existing relationship between Republic and Nordstrom”); Mewawalla v. Middle- 16 man, 601 F. Supp. 3d 574, 596-97 (N.D. Cal. 2022) (upholding fraud claims based 17 on, inter alia, defendant’s promises that it planned “to grow Xpanse into an inde-18 pendent, publicly traded company”).

19 Moog misrepresents the law, arguing that “statements of future action” are 20 “unactionable.” (Mot. at 26.) But Moog’s own cited authority states the opposite, 21 namely that “broken promises of future conduct may, however, be actionable.” Tar- 22 mann v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 2 Cal. App. 4th 153, 158-59 (1991) (“mak-23 ing a promise with an honest but unreasonable intent to perform is wholly different 24 from making one with no intent to perform”). That is exactly the case here.

25 Second, Moog argues that “Skyryse’s fraud claim fails for lack of reasonable 26 reliance” because “there was no contractual obligation whatsoever to proceed to 27 Phase 2.” (Mot. at 26-27.) That is wrong for two reasons. First, Skyryse pleaded that 28

1 it reasonably relied on Moog's false assurances in making a nearly $1 million pay-2 ment to Moog before it had "received the [REDACTED]" 3 and then never received them. (Counterclaims, ¶ 61.) Skyryse also alleges that after 4 relying on Moog's false statements, Skyryse had "lost one year in a two year pro-5 gram, empty handed and scrambling to find a replacement, while Moog [is] in pos-6 session of vast knowledge of our solution and $1.25M of Skyryse funding."
7 (Id., ¶ 69.) And second, even on the merits, Moog fails to cite any contractual pro-8 vision to support its disputed theory that it had no obligation to proceed to Phase 2, 9 which is belied by the terms of the SOW, under which Moog agreed "[REDACTED] 10 [REDACTED]" to "[REDACTED]
11 . ." (Id., ¶ 31).⁹

12 Third, Moog makes a throwaway argument that Skyryse's fraud allegations 13 fail to meet Rule 9(b)'s particularity requirement. (Mot. at 27.) But Moog simply 14 ignores Skyryse's specific allegations about who said what, when, and how, which 15 are more than sufficient. (Counterclaims, ¶¶ 56-60.) This is why its reliance on Vess
16 v. Ciba-Geigy Corporation, which describes Rule 9(b)'s requirement that a plaintiff 17 plead the "particulars of when, where, or how" is misplaced. 317 F.3d 1097, 1106 18 (9th Cir. 2003).

19 Moog's remaining case law is distinguishable. Moog cites to Coastal Ab- 20 stract, but that case did not involve fraud claims and instead analyzed "liability under 21 either the Lanham Act or the California law of defamation." Coastal Abstract Serv.,

22 _____

23 ⁹ As a legal matter, that the work to be performed was "[REDACTED]" does not 24 undermine the enforceability of SOW1. New York law is clear that in such "exten-25 sive and complex" agreements, it may necessary that "practical details will require 26 refinement as the project begins to take shape." Tractebel, 487 F.3d at 97-98. This 27 makes Moog's reliance on Baymiller misplaced. That case involved statements that 28 were "contradicted by the express language of the" agreement. Baymiller v. Guar- antee Mut. Life Co., No. SA-CV-99-1566DOC(ANX), 2000 WL 33774562, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 3, 2000). Here, the opposite is true, and to the extent Moog disagrees, this is a merits dispute and not grounds for dismissal.

1 Inc. v. First Am. Title Ins. Co., 173 F.3d 725, 731 (9th Cir. 1999). Glen Holly actually 2 supports Skyryse's position because this Court determined that defendant's state-3 ment regarding present intentions about future conduct, that it "was in a position to 4 deliver 24-frame software for the V.I.P. editing system," constituted "an actionable 5 assertion of fraud." Glen Holly Ent., Inc. v. Tektronix, Inc., 100 F. Supp. 2d 1086, 6 1097 (C.D. Cal. 1999). Galvez v. Local 804 Welfare Trust Fund is distinguishable 7 because unlike here, the plaintiff did not allege that the statements were untrue when 8 made or that the speaker had knowledge of the falsity. 543 F. Supp. 316, 318
9 (E.D.N.Y. 1982). Indigo Group USA Inc. v. Polo Ralph Lauren Corp. is also distin-10 guishable because that case involved "nonactionable expressions of opinion."
11 No. 2:11-CV-05883-JHN-CW, 2011 WL 13128301, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 25, 2011).

12 F. Skyryse sufficiently alleges that Moog tortiously and intentionally 13 interfered with Skyryse's contractual and business relationships.

Skyryse makes detailed allegations describing how Moog tortiously and intentionally interfered with existing contractual and business relationships, in support of Skyryse’s sixth and seventh counterclaims. For example, Moog took steps to “[REDACTED],” knowing it was a Skyryse customer and “[REDACTED]” to “[REDACTED],” glean confidential information about Skyryse, and “[REDACTED]” on Skyryse. (Counter-claims, ¶ 87.) These allegations alone are sufficient to state a claim for tortious interference of contract. See whiteCryption Corp. v. Arxan Tech, Inc., 2016 WL 3275944, at *4-5 (N.D. Cal. Jun. 15, 2016) (upholding interference with contract claim where counterclaimant alleged that counter-defendant induced counterclaimant’s customer to disclose confidential counterclaimant’s confidential information). They are also sufficient to state a claim for intentional interference with business relationships, including because they raise the inference that Moog took steps to interfere with other business relationships. SuccessWare, Inc. v. ServiceTitan, Inc., No.

1 CV-20-5179-DSF-PVCx, 2020 WL 12967998, at *9 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 10, 2020) (up-2 holding “interference with existing business relationships” claim where party “al-3 lege[d] interference with its relationships with existing customers” and explaining it 4 was unnecessary “to identify specific customers who switched”).

5 Moog’s arguments to the contrary lack merit. Moog first argues that Skyryse’s 6 “sixth counterclaim fails because it has not identified a specific contract that was 7 purportedly interfered with . . . by its data, terms, or otherwise.” (Mot. at 38.) But 8 such allegations are not required for Skyryse to allege tortious interference with con-9 tract because Skyryse need only identify “the third party . . . with whom they con-10 tracted and the nature and extent of their relationship.” UMG Recordings, Inc. v.
11 Global Eagle Ent., No. cv-14-3466-MMM-JPRx, 2015 WL 12746208, at *22, 1115 12 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 30, 2015); Moore v. Apple, 73 F. Supp. 3d 1191, 1203 (N.D. Cal.
13 2014) (rejecting argument that a “[p]laintiff must identify a specific contract term or 14 language”).

15 Skyryse has adequately described the nature of its relationship with Robinson:
16 “Skyryse and Robinson would collaborate to develop a program to install Skyryse’s 17 FlightOS flight control system in a Robinson R66 helicopter and Robinson would 18 purchase FlightOS shipsets beginning upon FAA approval.” (Counterclaims, ¶ 127.)
19 Moog knew of Skyryse’s relationship with Robinson since at least as early as No-20 vember 2021 when Mr. Norman confirmed for Moog’s CEO that [REDACTED] “[REDACTED]

21 [REDACTED]” (Id., ¶ 87.) Both cases cited by Moog are distinguishable.
22 They involved plaintiffs that, unlike Skyryse, failed to identify the particular entity 23 with which they had a relationship. See, e.g., Teledyne Risi, Inc. v. Martin-Baker 24 Aircraft Co. Ltd., No. CV-15-07936-SJO-GJSX, 2016 WL 8857029, at *5 (C.D. Cal.
25 Feb. 2, 2016) (dismissing claim where plaintiff “failed to allege any third-party con-26 tract or relationship”); Gemsa Enters., LLC v. Pretium Packaging, LLC, No. SACV-27 21-844-JVS-JDEX, 2021 WL 4551200, at *6 (C.D. Cal. July 27, 2021) (dismissing 28 claim based on “dealings with various unnamed others”).

1 Moog next argues, without legal authority, that Skyryse's sixth counterclaim 2 fails to allege that Moog "intended to interfere with or disrupt" Skyryse's contract
3 with Robinson. (Mot. at 38.) But Moog ignores the allegations describing Moog's 4 intent (Counterclaims, ¶ 129), which Skyryse is permitted to allege generally. See 5 Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) ("Malice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's 6 mind may be alleged generally"). There is also no requirement to allege specific 7 intent under California law. SIC Metals, Inc. v. Hyundai Steel Co., No. SACV 18-8 00912-CPC-PLAx, 2019 WL 1883901, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 18, 2019) (denying mo-9 tion to dismiss even though plaintiffs did "not offer factual allegations to support 10 their contention that Hyundai specifically intended to induce R-Techo's breach").

11 Moog also argues that Skyryse's sixth counterclaim should be dismissed be-12 cause Skyryse fails to allege how the contracts were breached, that its relationship 13 with Robinson was harmed, or that damages resulted. But there is no requirement 14 under California law that Skyryse "allege an actual or inevitable breach of contract." 15 Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co., 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1129 (1990). An 16 interference claim arises if the plaintiff pleads that its "performance is made more 17 costly or burdensome." Id.; Nestle USA, Inc. v. Best Foods LLC, 562 F. Supp. 3d 18 626, 633 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 20, 2021) (finding pleading sufficient based on "mere 'dis-19 ruption of the contractual relationship'" without breach). Skyryse meets this stand-20 ard because it has alleged sufficient facts to create a plausible inference that Moog's 21 actions made Skyryse or Robinson's performance more difficult. (Counterclaims, ¶¶ 22 87, 126-136.)

23 Moog's arguments regarding damages miss the point because Skyryse's alle-24 gations regarding harm are sufficient at this stage, before Skyryse has been permitted 25 to take discovery. Asics Am. Corp. v. Lutte Licensing Grp. LLC, No.
26 SACV131993JGBJPRX, 2014 WL 10538912, at *7 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 28, 2014) 27 (denying motion to dismiss interference claim because "general allegations of dam-28 ages [are] sufficient at the motion to dismiss stage").

1 Moog makes only a single halfhearted argument against Skyryse's seventh 2 counterclaim. Specifically, Moog claims Skyryse's counterclaim for intentional in-3 terference with business relationships should be dismissed because it "is not a rec-4 ognized standalone cause of action in the Ninth Circuit." (Mot. at 37.) Moog again 5 is wrong on the law. As this Court explained in SuccessWare, a party states a claim 6 for intentional interference with existing business relationships where it alleges "in-7 terference with its relationships with existing customers." 2020 WL 12967998, at *9.
8 Skyryse "need not identify specific third parties with whom it was negotiating," so 9 long as it alleged "ongoing relationships with its customers and" that defendant "in-10 duced or attempted to induce these customers to" take actions "to the detriment of" 11 plaintiff. Id. Skyryse has more than met this standard.

12 G. Skyryse sufficiently alleges that Moog intentionally interfered 13 with Skyryse's prospective business advantage.

14 Skyryse's eighth counterclaim is supported by detailed allegations describing 15 Moog's coordinated course of conduct to induce Skyryse to terminate the parties' 16 relationship so Moog could unlawfully take Skyryse's confidential information, de-17 velop a copycat business, and steal Skyryse's business opportunities. Moog took 18 steps to "██████████" on Skyryse and its existing and prospective business rela-19 tionships with customers such as Robinson in order to cause Skyryse harm. (Counter-20 claims, ¶¶ 87, 134.) Moog's own Ninth Circuit authority makes clear that this is 21 sufficient to state a claim for intentional interference with prospective economic ad-22 vantage. Garter-Bare Co. v. Munsingwear Inc., 723 F.2d 707, 716 (9th Cir. 1984) 23 (finding allegations that defendant "announced abandonment of the research and de-24 velopment under its Agreement" with plaintiff and "its simultaneous development" 25 and "merchandising" of the relevant process "lead to inevitable inferences of dam-26 age to [plaintiff's] ability to enter into any other profitable relationships").

27 Moog's arguments miss the mark. Moog first argues that Skyryse's claim 28 should be dismissed because Skyryse "does not identify any specific or particular

1 prospective business relationships.” (Mot. at 40.) Not so. Skyryse identifies its rela-2 tionship with Robinson Helicopter as a customer with whom it is working to develop 3 future business plans, with which Moog interfered. (Counterclaims, ¶ 132.) This 4 makes Skyryse’s claim nothing like those dismissed in Damabeh and Teledyne, 5 where plaintiffs alleged interference with the marketplace as a whole. Teledyne Risi, 6 Inc v. Martin-Baker Aircraft Co. Ltd., 2016 WL 8857029, at *6 (dismissing claim 7 where defendant “interfered with the economic relationship between Teledyne and 8 the sequencer marketplace as a whole”); Damabeh v. 7-Eleven, Inc., No. 5:12-CV-9 1739-LHK, 2013 WL 1915867, at *10 (N.D. Cal. May 8, 2013) (dismissing claim 10 where plaintiff alleged defendant “interfered ‘with employees and customers’” with-11 out identifying them).

12 Moog further asserts, without legal authority, that Skyryse’s claim should be 13 dismissed because Skyryse fails to allege: (1) Moog’s knowledge of the third parties; 14 (2) intentional conduct by Moog; (3) disruption of the relationships; and (4) resulting 15 harm. Moog is wrong in all respects. As to Moog’s first and second points, Skyryse 16 alleges that Moog was aware that Robinson was “[REDACTED]” 17 (id., ¶ 87), and also that Moog fraudulently induced Skyryse to terminate the SOW 18 so that Moog could abandon the parties’ “[REDACTED]” and 19 use Skyryse’s confidential technology to create a copycat business with Genesys to 20 steal Skyryse’s prospective customers, one of whom is Robinson. (Counterclaims, 21 ¶¶ 48-71.) Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp., 29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1153 (re-22 quiring only “that the defendant knew that the interference was certain or substan-23 tially certain to occur as a result of its action”). As to Moog’s third and fourth points, 24 those arguments not only ignore the allegations above, they also ignore the Ninth 25 Circuit precedent Moog itself cites, where a defendant’s “abandonment of the re-26 search and development under its Agreement with [plaintiff], added to its simulta-27 neous development” and commercialization of the relevant process, created “inevi-28 table inferences of damage to [plaintiff’s] ability to enter into any other profitable

1 relationships.” Garter-Bare, 723 F.2d at 716. As Skyryse alleges, Moog engaged in 2 just such conduct.

3 H. Skyryse sufficiently alleges that Moog engaged in unfair 4 competition.

5 Skyryse’s detailed allegations supports its ninth counterclaim under all three 6 prongs of California’s unfair competition law.

7 Unlawful – Skyryse alleges that Moog violated California law by tortiously 8 interfering with Skyryse’s contractual relationships. (Counterclaims, ¶¶ 126-30.) 9 This is sufficient to state a claim under the UCL’s unlawful prong. Test-Rite Prod- 10 ucts Corp. v. Puma Indus. Co. Ltd., 2015 WL 13919191, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 11 2015) (finding UCL claim survives when based on “intentional interference with 12 contract”). Moog cites Ingels v. Westwood One Broadcasting Services, Inc., but that 13 case does not require a different result because, unlike Skyryse, the plaintiff failed 14 to allege any unlawful conduct. 129 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1060 (2005).

15 Unfair – Skyryse sufficiently alleges that Moog engaged in unfair conduct.
16 As Moog’s cited authority explains, the “‘unfair’ prong of the UCL” creates a cause 17 of action for a business practice that is unfair even if not proscribed by some other 18 law when the conduct “offends an established public policy or when the practice is 19 immoral, unethical, oppressive, unscrupulous or substantially injurious to consum-20 ers.” Cappello v. Walmart Inc., 394 F. Supp. 3d 1015, 1023-24 (N.D. Cal. 2019).
21 Moog engaged in a course of unfair conduct to secure payment for work it failed to 22 complete, and to deceptively induce Skyryse to cancel part of the parties’ business 23 relationship so Moog could use Skyryse’s confidential and proprietary information 24 to create a copycat business with Genesys. (Counterclaims, ¶¶ 48-74.) Teledyne 25 Risi, Inc., a case on which Moog relies, confirms that this is more than sufficient to 26 state a claim. 2016 WL 8857029, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 2, 2016) (upholding UCL 27 claim where “[p]laintiff asserts that Defendant violated California’s unfair business 28

1 competition laws by using Teledyne's confidential and proprietary information to 2 create a separate sequencer and cut Teledyne out of the JSF program").

3 Moog also took affirmative steps to interfere with the mobility of its Califor-4 nia-based employees because it was so "██████████" legitimately against 5 Skyryse, which was offering "██████████." (Counterclaims, ¶ 82.) Moog 6 contacted these employees so they would "██████████"
7 "██████████" from leaving Moog, despite knowing the employees "██████████" 8 "██████████" and that Moog did
9 not "██████████." (Id., ¶¶ 84-85.) Such conduct plainly vio-10 lates California's strong public policy supporting employee mobility. Edwards v.
11 Arthur Andersen LLP, 44 Cal. 4th 937, 946 (2008) (explaining how California 12 "courts have consistently affirmed that section 16600 evinces a settled legislative 13 policy in favor of open competition and employee mobility"). Moog cites Cel-Tech
14 Communications, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Telephone for the non-controversial 15 proposition that "[i]njury to a competitor is not equivalent to injury to competition." 16 20 Cal. 4th 163, 187 (1999). But Moog ignores that its executive team's scheme to 17 "██████████" on Skyryse and inhibit the lawful hiring of California-based em-18 ployees directly harmed those employees whose mobility was impaired, not just 19 Skyryse. Rezner v. Bayerische Hypo-Und Vereinsbank AG, No. C 06-02064 JW, 2011 20 WL 6329854, at *6 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 8, 2011) ("[W]here the pleading states a prima 21 facie case of harm stemming from an apparently unfair business practice, dismissal 22 on the pleadings is generally inappropriate, as the court cannot weigh the utility of 23 the defendant's conduct").

24 Fraudulent – Moog argues that "Skyryse's UCL claim fails under the 'fraud-25 ulent' prong because it alleges no facts demonstrating that Moog is likely to mislead 26 consumers at large." (Mot. at 41.) Moog ignores Skyryse's allegation that on 27 March 7, 2022, Moog and its new subsidiary, Genesys, announced to the public that 28 Genesys had "started development of the 4th axis on" its "HeliSAS Autopilot and 1 Stability Augmentation System.” (Counterclaims, ¶ 77.) This deceptively suggested 2 to consumers that it was Moog and Genesys that had “started development of the 4th 3 axis on” for the Robinson R44 helicopter, when in fact it was Skyryse that developed 4 and pioneered these advances, and Moog had been using and exploiting confidential 5 information it acquired from Skyryse to enable Genesys to develop that system.

6 (Id., ¶¶ 74-77.) Moog’s statement, directed to the public at large and to Robinson 7 Helicopter users in particular, sufficiently alleges the who, what, where, and when 8 of Moog’s fraudulent statements to consumers at large. Moore v. Mars Petcare U.S., Inc. 966 F.3d 1007, 1017 (9th Cir. 2020) (finding “fraudulent” prong satisfied when 9 complaint pleads a probability that consumers “acting reasonably in the circum-10 stances, could be misled”); Williams v. Gerber Prods. Co., 552 F.3d 934, 938-39 11 (9th Cir. 2008) (“Whether a practice is deceptive [under the UCL fraudulent prong] 12 is generally a question of fact” which “usually cannot be made on demurrer” or mo-13 tion to dismiss.). This makes Moog’s cited authority inapplicable.

14
15 IV. CONCLUSION

16 For the reasons described above, Skyryse respectfully requests that Moog’s 17 motion be denied in its entirety. To the extent any part of the motion is granted, 18 Skyryse requests leave to amend. Mirmehdi v. United States, 689 F.3d 975, 985 (9th 19 Cir. 2012) (“requests for leave to amend should be granted with extreme liberality”).
